

Consent

Purpose:

You are invited to take part in a research study designed to look at how people make social judgments and decisions. You are being asked to participate in this study because we are interested in these processes in a wide variety of people. The purpose of this study is to advance our understanding of how individual differences in cognitive functioning contribute to social behavior.

Procedures:

If you agree to participate, you will be asked to make judgments or decisions about positive and negative outcomes for yourself and for other people, or to write brief descriptions of your own moral experiences. Afterwards, you will be asked questions related to your reactions to the events, as well as some personality traits and background variables that may affect information processing in these tasks. Due to the ongoing coronavirus pandemic, you may also be asked questions related to your experiences about the situation. You may withdraw from this study at any point by closing out of the browser window. Depending on the study, your participation will last between approximately 5 minutes to an hour. You will be paid $7.25 an hour for your participation in this study.

Risks and Benefits:

There are no known or anticipated risks associated with this study. Depending on the study you are participating in, you may be asked to imagine unpleasant scenarios, but these scenarios are no worse than what you might read about in a news story about a violent event such as a war or a natural disaster. These stimuli may be disturbing to you. Similarly, questions related to coronavirus may be stressful to you, but given that these topics are commonly discussed in everyday discourse (e.g. the news or social media), the information is no worse than what you would normally encounter in daily life. It is recommended that you should not complete this study if you suspect that you will be particularly sensitive to or negatively affected by such scenarios or questions. You will be alerted before you read such scenarios or questions, and you are free to withdraw from the study for any reason at any time.

Although this study will not benefit you personally, we hope that our results will add to the knowledge about how people make decisions about positive and negative outcomes for themselves and for other people.

Confidentiality:

All of your responses will be anonymous. Only the researchers involved in this study and those responsible for research oversight (such as representatives of the Yale University Human Research Protection Program, and the Yale University Human Subjects Committee) will have access to any information that you provide. When we publish any results from this study we will do so in a way that does not identify you. We may also share the data with other researchers so that they can check the accuracy of our conclusions but will only do so if we are confident that your confidentiality is protected.

For some studies, we may ask your permission to share some of your data (e.g. descriptions of your own moral experiences) in a non-identifiable way with participants in future studies. You will have the option later in the study to withdraw your permission for us to share your de-identified data with other participants. Withdrawing this permission will not have any penalty.

The researcher will not know your name, and no identifying information will be connected to your survey answers in any way. The survey is therefore anonymous. However, your account is associated with an mTurk or Prolific number that the researcher has to be able to see in order to pay you, and in some cases these numbers are associated with public profiles which could, in theory, be searched. For this reason, though the researcher will not be looking at anyone's public profiles, the fact of your participation in the research (as opposed to your actual survey responses) is technically considered "confidential" rather than truly anonymous. In some studies, you may be asked to optionally provide your Twitter handle. If you choose to provide it, your Twitter screen name will be linked to your survey responses but will be immediately de-identified upon data analysis, so that it will then become anonymous.

Voluntary Participation:

Your participation in this study is voluntary. You are free to decline to participate, to end your participation at any time for any reason, or to refuse to answer any individual question without penalty.

Questions:

If you have any questions about this study, you may contact Dr. Molly Crockett, the person in charge of this research study. She can be reached at molly.crockett@yale.edu.

If you would like to talk with someone other than the researchers to discuss problems or concerns, to discuss situations in the event that a member of the research team is not available, or to discuss your rights as a research participant, you may contact the Yale University Human Subjects Committee, 203-785-4688, human.subjects@yale.edu. Additional information is available at <http://your.yale.edu/research-support/human-research/research-participants>

Are you 18 years of age or older?

Attention check 1

In studies like ours, there are sometimes a few people who do not carefully read the questions they are asked and just "quickly click through the survey." These random answers are problematic because they compromise the results of the studies. It is very important that you pay attention and read each question. In order to show that you read our questions carefully (and regardless of your own opinion), please answer "TikTok" in the question on the next page.

When an important event is happening or is about to happen, many people try to get informed about the development of the situation. In such situations, where do you get your information from?

☐ Newspapers

- ☐ Facebook
- ☐ Twitter
- ☐ TikTok
- ☐ Other
- ☐ TV
- ☐ Reddit
- ☐ Radio
- ☐ Youtube

Attention check 2

Please read the following information carefully.

Roses are one of the most popular flowers, grown all around the world. There are now almost three hundred species of roses, with a huge number of different colors, shapes, fragrances, and sizes. While most roses originated in Asia, smaller numbers are native to Europe, North America, and North Africa. Roses are often gardener's favorite plants to grow because of their beauty and the strong fragrance that they have. There are many things to consider when growing roses. While they enjoy sunshine, they are a very thirsty plant and will need regular watering in hotter, drier climates.

On the previous page you read some information about roses. Which of the following was NOT discussed?

- ☐ Roses can suffer with pests like aphids and blackfly
- ☐ Most roses originated in Asia
- ☐ Roses are one of the most popular flowers
- ☐ There are nearly three hundred rose species

- ☐ Roses are often thirsty plants and appreciate regular watering
- ☐ Roses often prefer to be planted where they can receive a lot of sunshine

Intro

In this task you will read about a debate that is happening right now around the world.

We will give you some of the justifications that politicians and experts are giving for different policies, and ask you some questions about your opinions.

Please read the scenario carefully and answer as honestly as you can.

Vaccines Intro

COVID-19 remains a public health threat. Pharmaceutical companies have developed effective and safe vaccines, and the Australian government has purchased hundreds of millions of doses – more than enough to provide first doses and boosters for everyone in the country.

While the Australian government currently has a large excess of doses, many other countries are dealing with severe shortages of vaccines and do not have enough to even begin giving first doses to their population.

Australian political leaders are now debating whether these surplus vaccines purchased by the Australian government should be redistributed around the globe.

Some are arguing that the vaccines should be sent wherever they can achieve the greatest good, even if that means sending them to other countries. Because many people in other countries have still not received any vaccines, they argue that we should redistribute the vaccines to provide first doses to those in other countries.

Others are arguing that the vaccines should be kept in Australia to protect Australian citizens. They argue that because of remaining uncertainties about the pandemic, the government should reserve a supply of extra booster vaccines as a backup in case they are needed, as they might also be effective in the case of an emerging new variant.

Which policy do you think should be adopted?

- ☐ Strongly support surplus Australian-bought vaccines being reserved for protecting Australian citizens
- ☐ Indifferent
- ☐ Strongly support surplus Australian-bought vaccines being given to whoever needs them most, even if that means sending them to other countries

How morally right or wrong would it be for surplus Australian-bought vaccines to be given to whoever needs them most, even if that means sending them to other countries?

- ☐ Absolutely morally wrong
- ☐ Neither right nor wrong
- ☐
- ☐
- ☐ Absolutely morally right

Vaccines Trust

Imagine that the mayor of a major city in your region is arguing that surplus Australian-bought vaccines should be reserved for protecting Australian citizens.

This mayor said, "We have a duty to reserve our surplus vaccines as a backup to protect the people in our own country, before we start helping other nations."

Imagine that the mayor of a major city in your region is arguing that surplus Australian-bought vaccines should be given to whoever needs them most.

This mayor said, "We should be impartial in distributing our surplus vaccines and send them where they can achieve the greatest good, even if that means sending them to other countries."

Think of this ladder below as representing where people stand in your country. At the top of the ladder are the people who are the best off, those who have the most money, the most education, and the most respected jobs. At the bottom are the people who are the worst off, those who have the least money, the least education, the least respected jobs, or no job. The higher up you are on this ladder, the closer you are to the people at the very top; the lower you are, the closer you are to the people at the very bottom.

Where would you place yourself on this ladder? Please indicate the number corresponding to the position on the ladder where you think you stand at this time in your life, compared to people in your country.

In political matters, people talk of "the left" and "the right." How would you place your views on this scale, generally speaking?
